The guideon event was more than just a regular old relay race. All contestants not only had to run a quarter mile on Warrior and Sentinel Fields as fast as they could, but also keep their guideon held properly, with respect for their specific companies.

For the third straight year Company E, 305th Military Intelligence Battalion took the cake during the 112th Military Intelligence Brigade's Organizational Day Commander's Cup events, Friday.

Placing in nearly each event, participants helped secure their title, winning them yet another Commander's Cup trophy.

Securing their title was just the one part of O-Day, since most were out just to enjoy the summer sun.

Esprit de Corps ran rampant throughout the battalion, as representatives accepted the trophy from Brig. Gen. James "Spider" A. Marks, commanding general, and Command Sgt. Maj. Lawrence Haubrich, command sergeant major, U.S. Army Intelligence Center and Fort Huachuca.

Sporting events included everything from good old-fashioned ruck marches to games of horseshoes.

Many of the events were held on Warrior and Sentinel Fields, to include food and game booths.

Pvt. Christopher Hay, Company A, 305th Military Intelligence Battalion, warms up before a game of horseshoes.

Spc. Mike Pezeschki, Company E, 305th MI Bn., placed second overall in the military bench press competition held in Eifler Sports Complex.

USAG pays back E/305th 11-3, moves closer to Cup

By Sgt. Jessica Inigo
Time Out Editor

In a final game that may have just sealed the fate of who will hold the Commander’s Cup title for all sporting events throughout the year, neck-and-neck teams waged a war against each other in softball.

U.S. Army Garrison, Aardvarks, beat out three-year running champions, Company E, 305th Military Intelligence Battalion, during the AA League semi-championship game Tuesday night on Sentinel Field, with the final score of 11-3.

“Our win tonight was a little revenge – pay back – for a loss by Echo earlier in the season,” said Cuahutemoc Fernandez, USAG coach.

Up until the semi-championship softball game, the Aardvarks and E/305th were a mere 25 points difference in deciding who wins the Commander’s Cup, with 810 points and 835 points respectively.

Because of Tuesday night’s win, USAG believes they are now ahead and are prepared to receive the trophy, though not all softball points or golf points are added in.

“This is the closest I’ve ever seen the points in all my years here,” said Michelle Kimsey, sports programmer and recreation specialist, who has worked in the Sports and Fitness Division eight years.

The success of this year’s victory was the work of all team members, according to Fernandez.

“The team is great overall, by the efforts of everyone. Everyone is out hustling, and that’s all I can ask for. Even the few guys who are on the bench help in our success by being base coaches to guide runners in. It is an overall effort with no single individual doing any better than the next,” he said. “I think we’ll go into the championship doing as well as we have been doing, even though we’re going into it kind of blind, because we haven’t seen what Bravo Company can do.”

USAG moved into the championship game against Company B, 305th MI Bn. Wednesday night. Scores or winners were not available in time for publication.

Company A, 40th Signal Battalion and Headquarters Company, 306th MI Bn. competed in the A League tournament Wednesday night on Warrior Field, as well. Winners will be announced in next week’s issue of the Fort Huachuca Scout.

Tonight there will be a “Bragging Rights” game against the two league’s winners tentatively set for 6 p.m. on Sentinel Field. A trophy will be awarded to the winners, along with rights to brag about being the best team on post.

Though “Bragging Rights” doesn’t count toward the Commander’s Cup, being the best of the best always helps to boost morale, according to Kimsey.

The softball season is the last sport of the year to count for Commander’s Cup points. A new season of sports begins with the upcoming football season.

Robert Collins, Company E, 305th Military Intelligence Battalion coach, takes a swing at the ball hoping to secure the company's winning streak. For the past three years E/305th have won the Commander's Cup at the end of the sports season. This loss may hurt their chances for a fourth win.

Charles Arnone, USAG outfielder and leadoff hitter, scores the first of the Aardvarks 11 runs in their 11-3 defeat against rivals, Company E, 305th Military Intelligence Battalion, who previously beat USAG in a game earlier in the season. This triumph may win the war for the Aardvarks, giving them the push for points to win the Commander's Cup at the end of the sports season.

FUN DAY Organizational Day A family favorite

By Sgt. Jessica Inigo
Time Out Editor

The 112th Military Intelligence Brigade's Organizational Day Friday proved to be something the whole family could enjoy.

For the more sports minded, a host of competitive events were scheduled throughout the day, while the more free spirited enjoyed fun activities.

Children of all ages took advantage of the dunk tank, hosted by the 18th Military Police Detachment. Some participants even enjoyed getting their “favorite” MPs back for past citations issued.

Free activities were set up for the children, including a jumping castle, face painting, and a penny toss, to name a few.

Plus, B Troop and their horses brought out the child in everyone with free rides.

Food vendors rounded out the day with spicy burritos and sweet cotton candy.

All in all, it was a change of pace for the various MI units on post and a fun day for everyone.

An M16 disassembly was part of O-day. Soldiers competed against each other against the clock.

New totem pole protects ISEC

By Sgt. Jessica Inigo
Time Out Editor

Students attending Cochise College Art 270 class on-post left a lasting mark near Fort Huachuca’s U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Command building Aug. 8 at 2 p.m.

A five-foot, five-inch totem pole, depicting faces, animals, and other symbolic images, was assembled with ceramic figures the eight students made for their final project.

“I wanted to have the totem pole somewhere the students could come to look at and enjoy,” said Cheryl Osburn, ceramics instructor.

In fact, she left its final destination up to one student, Candy Rangel, who found just the spot.

The ISEC building, across from Greeley Hall, had just the landscaping to give the totems justice. Now, just like coastal natives of the Northwest did in the past, ISEC will be protected by the totems mythological powers.

The clay clan, as the artists have come to be known by, consists of soldiers, U.S. Army family members, and support personnel who work on Fort Huachuca.

The totem pole depicts exaggerated human faces, an eagle and a fish.

The students used techniques in handling clay they learned in class, including glazing their work and putting the pieces in the high fire kilns located in the Morale, Welfare, and Recreation Arts Center.

Students were: Rangel, Larry Brown,

Robert Collins, Natascha Maxwell, Elizabeth Montgomery, Nandy Pflanz, and Lisa Watkins

“Our goal was to leave something permanent as a reminder of the time we spent working, and for some of us, living on Fort Huachuca,” said Osburn.

Students help decide how the totem will look.
